

QUEST FOR IDENTITY IN NEVER LET ME GO AND
MIDNIGHT'S CHILDREN

Nimetullah ALDEMİR

© Copyright 2025

Printing, broadcasting and sales rights of this book are reserved to Academician Bookstore House Inc. All or parts of this book may not be reproduced, printed or distributed by any means mechanical, electronic, photocopying, magnetic paper and/or other methods without prior written permission of the publisher. Tables, figures and graphics cannot be used for commercial purposes without permission. This book is sold with banderol of Republic of Türkiye Ministry of Culture.

ISBN

978-625-375-409-9

Page and Cover Design

Typesetting and Cover Design by Akademisyen

Book Title

Quest for Identity in Never Let me Go and
Midnight's Children

Publisher Certificate Number

47518

Author

Nimetullah ALDEMİR
ORCID iD: 0000-0001-8727-5207

Printing and Binding

Vadi Printingpress

Publishing Coordinator

Yasin DİLMEN

Bisac Code

FOR000000

DOI

10.37609/akya.3593

Library ID Card

Aldemir, Nimetullah.

Quest for Identity in Never Let me Go and Midnight's Children / Nimetullah Aldemir.

Ankara : Akademisyen Yayinevi Kitabevi, 2025.

132 p. ; 135x210 mm.

Includes References.

ISBN 9786253754099

GENERAL DISTRIBUTION

Akademisyen Kitabevi AŞ

Halk Sokak 5 / A Yenışehir / Ankara

Tel: 0312 431 16 33

siparis@akademisyen.com

www.akademisyen.com

PREFACE

Throughout most of the 20th century, literary criticism and common culture viewed identity as an archaeological project. For many years we have envisioned the Self to be a buried treasure, a static essence that has been suppressed by social pressures and traumatic events. The prevailing psychological model that emphasizes depth rather than continuity, posits that who we are is our internal essence as opposed to an external performance. This book contests this notion. It assumes that identity is not a psychological problem to be analyzed; however, it is a narrative to be presented, and it is a fluid process.

The central argument developed in this book is that the Self is created through the stories we tell about ourselves, and these stories are fundamentally temporal. By developing time into stories, we humanize time by establishing a beginning, a middle, and an anticipated ending. Therefore, the creation of identity is an effort to apply order to the unrelenting and impersonal flow of existence. However, the established frameworks that previously supported this “proleptic drive” (expectation of attaining a stable conclusion) have disintegrated. As we enter the new era of neoliberal instability and post-colonial reckoning, the “ending” is broken. This is no longer a promise of resolution and compromise, but often a threat of annihilation or chaotic noise and fragmentation.

This study examines this crisis through the lens of what I call the “Temporal Turn” in identity research. By shifting the analytical focus from the hermeneutics of depth (what’s inside?) to the hermeneutics of time (how much time is left?), we can understand the modern subject more clearly. To illustrate this, I examine two distinct but complementary manifestations of the temporal crisis in the works of Kazuo Ishiguro and Salman Rushdie.

In Never Let Me Go, Ishiguro illustrates the “stalled” subject. The clones of Hailsham face a future without possibility; their lives are defined solely by a predestined countdown to “completion”. Unable to project themselves into the traditional Bildungsroman structure, the clones are forced to project themselves sideways, developing a “lateral” identity. Kathy H. doesn’t narrate to discover a hidden self; she narrates to establish a waiting pattern. Kathy uses the remnants of the past (tapes, memories) to build a bridge over the uncertain and fragmented nature of her future. Kathy’s passivity is not a flaw of her character, but rather a strategic means of surviving a world that will deny her a future.

On the other hand, Midnight’s Children represents Rushdie’s examination of the “extreme” subject. Saleem Sinai is not denied a future, he is flooded with it. His life, intertwined as it is with the moment of Indian independence, is linked to the collective fate of the nation. Saleem’s problem is not a lack of meaning, but an excess of meaning; he becomes a vessel for countless others, and is split apart physically and psychologically by the demands of his own fragmented biography. Unlike Kathy, Saleem’s response is not cyclical, but spiral, a frantic attempt to deal with a multitude of competing voices within a single, fractured autobiography.

Despite their stylistic differences, both characters engage in “Narrative Postponement”. This concept suggests that identity is the act of postponing the end. Like Scheherazade, these characters use narrative not merely to record the past, but to delay the silence of the clock. Whether through Kathy’s hesitation or Saleem’s exaggeration, they construct a shelter out of language.

As such, this theory provides a new way to view contemporary literature and the modern condition. Rather than continuing to pursue the “multi-faceted character”, this theory encourages us to shift our focus toward the analysis of “temporal strategies.” If we continue to view identity through a psychological lens, we risk attributing fragmentation to personal deficiencies. On the contrary, when we view identity through a narrative lens, we attribute fragmentation not to the individual, but to the inadequacy of the narrative structure itself, which precludes a future or makes the past unmanageable.

In a sense, we are all clones awaiting completion, midnight children bound to a heavy history. The “search for identity” is not a quest for a treasure within the soul, but a structural attempt to continue the story. This book is an attempt to witness this struggle by listening to the unique rhythms, cycles and spirals, that the human subject uses to withstand the constraints of time.

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION.....	1
Introduction: The Temporal Turn in Identity	1
 CHAPTER 2
NEVER LET ME GO-THE ARCHITECTURE OF THE FINITE.....	15
1.1 The Retrospective Loop: Narrating from the Point of Stasis.....	15
1.2 The Ontology of the Copy: Lineage, Trash, and the ‘Possible’	26
1.3 Narrative Minimalism and the Refusal of Tragedy.....	33
 CHAPTER 3
IDENTITY IN A WORLD OF EXCESSIVE FUTURES: MIDNIGHT’S CHILDREN	53
3.1 The Accident of Synchronicity: Handcuffed to History.....	53
3.2 The Somatic Text: The Body as a Map of Excess.....	59
3.3 Chutneyfication and the Unreliable Archive.....	64
3.4 The Geometry of Amnesia: The Sundarbans and the Erasure of History.....	70
 CHAPTER 4
THE FAILURE OF NARRATIVE MASTERY	77
4.1 The Leaking Container: Saleem’s Struggle to Keep the Story Intact	77
4.2 The Claustrophobic Frame: Kathy’s Rigid Control	81
4.3 Breakdown as Truth: The Ethics of Failure	85

CHAPTER 3

THE ASYMMETRY OF SURVIVAL91

5.1 The Geometry of the Void vs. The Geometry of the Crowd.....92

5.2 The Object and the Fetish: Scarcity vs. Clutter99

5.3 The Politics of Form: Silence as Resistance vs. Noise as Resistance
106

CONCLUSION 113

REFERENCES123

REFERENCES

- Agamben, G. (1998). Homo sacer: Sovereign power and bare life (D. Heller-Roazen, Trans.). Stanford University Press.
- Bakhtin, M. M. (1981). The dialogic imagination: Four essays (M. Holquist, Ed.; C. Emerson & M. Holquist, Trans.). University of Texas Press.
- Bakhtin, M. M. (1984). Rabelais and his world (H. Iswolsky, Trans.). Indiana University Press.
- Baudrillard, J. (1994). Simulacra and simulation (S. F. Glaser, Trans.). University of Michigan Press.
- Baudrillard, J. (1996). The system of objects (J. Benedict, Trans.). Verso.
- Benjamin, W. (2008). The work of art in the age of mechanical reproduction (J. A. Underwood, Trans.). Penguin Books.
- Berlant, L. (2011). Cruel optimism. Duke University Press.
- Bhabha, H. K. (1994). The location of culture. Routledge.
- Brennan, T. (1989). The national longing for form. In Nation and narration (pp. 44–70). Routledge.
- Brooks, P. (1984). Reading for the plot: Design and intention in narrative. Alfred A. Knopf.
- Brown, B. (2001). Thing theory. Critical Inquiry, 28(1), 1–22.
- Butler, J. (2005). Giving an account of oneself. Fordham University Press.
- de Certeau, M. (1984). The practice of everyday life (S. Rendall, Trans.). University of California Press.
- Derrida, J. (1982). Margins of philosophy (A. Bass, Trans.). University of Chicago Press.
- Felman, S., & Laub, D. (1992). Testimony: Crises of witnessing in literature, psychoanalysis, and history. Routledge.
- Fisher, M. (2012). What Is Hauntology? Film Quarterly, 66(1), 16–24.
- Genette, G. (1980). Narrative discourse: An essay in method (J. E. Lewin, Trans.). Cornell University Press.
- Hutcheon, L. (1988). A poetics of postmodernism: History, theory, fiction. Routledge.
- Ishiguro, K. (2005). Never let me go. Faber and Faber.
- Jameson, F. (1986). Third-world literature in the era of multinational capitalism. Social Text, (15), 65–88.
- Kermode, F. (1967). The sense of an ending: Studies in the theory of fiction. Oxford University Press.
- Kortenaar, N. T. (1995). Midnight's Children and the allegory of history. ARIEL: A Review of International English Literature, 26(2), 37–62.
- Kristeva, J. (1982). Powers of horror: An essay on abjection (L. S. Roudiez, Trans.). Columbia University Press.

References

- Kumorek, M. (2021). The role of time in the theory of narrative identity in the philosophy of Paul Ricoeur. RUDN Journal of Philosophy, 25(3), 483–494.
- Leuenberger, M. (2023). A narrative pattern-theory of the self. In M. Herrmann (Ed.), Personhood, self-consciousness, and the first-person perspective (pp. 127–143)
- Levy, T. (2011). Human rights and the bildungsroman. Journal of Human Rights, 10(1), 11-20.
- Mauss, M. (1954). The gift: Forms and functions of exchange in archaic societies (I. Cunnison, Trans.). Cohen & West.
- McDonald, K. (2007). Days of past futures: Kazuo Ishiguro's Never Let Me Go as "speculative memoir". Biography, 30(1), 74–83.
- Narkunas, J. P. (2018). Reified life: Speculative capital and the ahuman condition. Fordham University Press.
- Ngai, S. (2005). Ugly feelings. Harvard University Press.
- Ricoeur, P. (1984). Time and narrative (K. McLaughlin & D. Pellauer, Trans.). University of Chicago Press.
- Robbins, B. (2007). Cruelty is bad: Banality and proximity in Never Let Me Go. Novel: A Forum on Fiction, 40(3), 289-302.
- Rushdie, S. (1995). Midnight's children. Jonathan Cape.
- Shanks, M. (2016). The archaeological imagination. Routledge.
- Stewart, S. (1993). On longing: Narratives of the miniature, the gigantic, the souvenir, the collection. Duke University Press.
- Whitehead, A. (2011). Writing with care: Kazuo Ishiguro's Never Let Me Go. Contemporary Literature, 52(1), 54-83.